WELLSFORD

I was asked a question yesterday, “Which books have influenced/impacted you most in recent years”? I am not an avid reader, I probably read between 6 and 12 books a year. Yes, I think I could say there are a few that have had an impact, but as I have pondered the question more, it is really clear the book that has by far and away had the most impact on me has been the Gospel of John.

I refer to it often, go back to it again and again. I find it so inspiring as I meet my Jesus, I am in awe of Him. I marvel at what He said, how He said it, who He stopped to speak to, who He released life, wholeness and healing to. Constantly Jesus is there revealing an extremely loving extravagant heavenly Father who has more than we could ever imagine to meet our need and fill our hearts and lives to overflowing with love and purpose.

Why wouldn't I want to pursue Him with all my heart and want to see Him do those same things He did then right here where we are.

It is such a privilege to be part of what our Father in heaven is doing here on the earth. He is at work in and through us, His Kingdom is being extended as we listen to His voice and follow His leading.

Geoff.
